SHOCK FROM JAPAN

ON Wednesday the Japanese police swooped on the headquarters of political secret societies, arresting thirteen members and seizing a considerable quantity of ammunition and weapons. In itself, this action, which uncovered a plot to kill the Prime Minister of Japan, Hayato Ikeda, along with certain of his political associates, needs no exaggerated headlines to prove its seriousness.

Apart from anything else, there is an unbroken link which joins the plot to the fearful societies which plagued pre-World War II Japan, and which subsequently seized power and took Japan into an aggressive war which ultimately brought about her own destruction. Unfortunately, not before Japan had brought death, desolation and misery in a manner unknown before upon the continent of Asia.

IT needs but a short memory, historically speaking, to find in the current "Kokushi-Kai" society just those qualities which were attributes of the societies of the 1930s. And although we are told that the "Kokushi-Kai" is ostensibly a society for the purpose of studying Japanese history and discussing current problems, it is significant that they, as their former counterparts, supplement their studies by physical violence to give concrete expression to their sedentary propositions.

The Black Dragon Society of Ryuhei Uchida, and the movements launched by Kita, Gondo, and Tachibana, and the pro-Fascist parties of Kenzo Nakano, and (later) Seigo Nakano, all met on the common ground the current "Kokushi-Kai" assumes to explore. Nor can it be lightly regarded that a member of the group, Taki Mikami, just arrested by the police, was a member of the secret young officer's group of the former Japanese Imperial Army which murdered the Japanese Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai, in 1932.

THE excuse given then is the excuse given by this current assassination group. That at heart, they are patriots with Japan's welfare as their reason for violence. The excuse offered by the "Kokushi-Kai" for the planned assassination of Premier Hayato Ikeda, is that as the elected leader of their nation, he lacks the qualities needed to suppress the Japanese Communist Party.

No doubt, such an excuse will find favour in other countries besides Japan, and it is not at all unlikely that this secret group will be hailed as misguided patriots at the worst. If such an excuse should be accepted, as it was in the 1930s, when these groups gained complete political power which subsequently led to Pearl Harbour and the rape of Asia, it will be a case of history repeating itself. The assurance Asia needs, and the assurance that the Japanese Government must give is that the secret societies will be vigilantly investigated, ruthlessly prosecuted and pitilessly exterminated.

Goa: Proposal also opposed by United States

'A CANCER IN INDIA'S BODY THAT MUST BE REMOVED'

United Nations, Dec. 13. Mr. C. S. Jha, India's Permanent United Nations Representative, denounced Portugal today for the "gross-kind of provocations" and said Goa was a "cancer in the body politic of India that must be removed."

Portugal must leave the Indian Continent even if this requires the use of force, he said.

He told a news conference that "the Government of India is a government of peace," but this does not mean "that we can

'JOJO' AS A MEDIATOR?

A local Portuguese resident has offered his services to the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, as a mediator in the current dispute over Goa. In making the offer, the resident, Mr. J. A. (Jojo) Gutierrez, has sent along a copy of yesterday's China Mail leader dealing with the Goa dispute. Mr. Gutierrez sent also a copy of his own letter published in the SCM Post. In his registered airmail letter to the Indian Premier, he said "For Lusophone good relationship, I am ready to fly to New Delhi and try to help seek a compromise and continuance of excellent relationship between India and Portugal."

be soft on this question—ever. "We will never accept the occupation of a part of India by any foreign power," he said.

"The freedom of India is not complete as long as Portuguese positions remain like pimples on the Indian Continent."

He referred to Goa, Daman and the three enclaves held by Portugal since the 16th Century.

Meanwhile, in Belgium, Western India, Lieutenant-General J.N. Chowdhry, General Officer Commanding India's Southern Command, arrived to set up his temporary headquarters.

Belgium is about 20 miles from the Goan border. General Chowdhry was in charge of Indian police action when Hyderabad State was integrated with the Indian Republic 12 years ago.—UPI & Reuter.

Another U.S. nuclear explosion

Washington, Dec. 13. The United States today exploded another small atomic device underground in its nuclear weapons test programme at the Nevada proving grounds.

The shot was announced by the Atomic Energy Commission in a one-sentence statement. The device was described as of "low yield," meaning its force was measured in thousands of tons of TNT or kilotons.—UPI.

United Nations, Dec. 13. Britain today called for a ceasefire in Katanga, but U Thant, the Acting Secretary-General, turned a cold shoulder to the proposal.

In a series of rapid-fire developments, the British formally urged U Thant to seek an end to the fighting as a preliminary move to Congolese unification negotiations.

Observers here said the Acting Secretary-General came as close as he could to turning down the appeal without actually rejecting it. While stating that he would lay the question before his Congo advisory committee, U Thant noted that Mr. Moise Tshombe, the Katangese Premier, had "expressed no anxiety or interest in any negotiations."

Bellicose

On the contrary, U Thant said, they had made "numerous bellicose statements." This was taken to be formal notice to Britain that any initiative for a ceasefire at this stage should come from the Katanga side and not the U.N., whose forces are battling to restore freedom of movement in the secessionist Congo province. U Thant also showed that he was in no great hurry to act upon the British request.

He summoned the 12-nation advisory group into session on Friday afternoon—some 48 hours after delivery today of the formal British note by Sir Patrick Dean Britain's resident representative.

The committee comprises U.N. members contributing to the operation in the Congo. The vast majority of these are African and Asian states that strongly support U Thant's handling of policy and oppose any ceasefire at this stage.

Humiliation

One group member observed that a ceasefire now at U.N. initiative would be a "humiliation" for the world body.

The U.N. sued for a ceasefire after the disastrous offensive against foreign mercenaries in Katanga last September and had to settle on terms advantageous to Mr. Tshombe.

African and Asian members have no intention now of risking a repetition.

The United States backed U Thant's stand to the hilt.

The U.S. Undersecretary of State Mr. George Ball, supporting the U.N., told Sir Patrick Dean that nothing in despatches from the Congo showed that Katanga officials had expressed any interest in negotiations with the United Nations.

Belief

Sir Patrick Dean, handed the memorandum to U Thant, declaring his country's belief that it is "the duty of the United Nations to bring about an end to hostilities and a return to the path of conciliation and negotiation."

It said Britain is "deeply disturbed by the course of events of the past week in the Congo" and that Britain "views with alarm the course of military events of the last few days."

Meanwhile Katanga's President Moise Tshombe has appealed to Pope John to intervene in his conflict with the United Nations. The Belgian press reported that Mr. Tshombe's appeal for the Pope's mediation said:

The officials, in a telephone interview, said it was believed more victims, trapped below decks when the fire broke out, would be extricated later today. The fire started early this morning and quickly spread to the ship's engine room and fuel tanks, said the Polish news agency.

Shipyard officials said this fire had been brought under control and rescue workers were

HK PROTEST 'Transmission takes time'

Commenting on the discrepancy in reports about the Hongkong protest on the proposed U.S. equalisation fee on cotton textile imports, a Government spokesman said today:

"Long and confidential telegrams take time in transmission and deciphering and it is quite possible that at 4.30 or 5 o'clock yesterday, the policy making people in the Colonial Office had not seen the telegram."

The Hongkong Government announced yesterday it had requested the British Government to lodge a strong protest in Washington against the proposed fee.

A Reuter report from London quoting a Colonial Office official said no protest had been received from Hongkong yesterday.

Grandma Moses dies at 101

Hoosick Falls, N.Y., Dec. 13. Grandma Moses, a little old countrywoman who became nationally famous for her paintings of rural scenes, died today at the age of 101.

The witty, little artist had been confined to a nursing home since July. Despite her confinement and a doctor's orders against painting, she remained "bright as a button" most of the time, friends reported. Her paintings, which she began in her seventies, never won plaudits from highbrow art critics. But she became a household word for the low-brows and her homely pictures were reproduced on millions of Christmas cards. Grandma, whose real name was Mrs. Anna Mary Robertson Moses, lived most of her life on the family farm in upstate New York. She had 10 children.—Reuter & AP.

SEARCH FOR REMAINS OF MR WONG YING-KAU POLICE CONTINUE WITH GRUESOME TASK

Police forensic experts and workmen are expected to complete the exhumation of a body in a hillside grave near No. 37 Repulse Bay-road in their search for the corpse of Mr Wong Ying-kau, prominent Hongkong merchant, believed to have been murdered shortly after his kidnapping in June, 1959.

Workers were still digging carefully at the site shortly before the China Mail went to press at 2 pm.

Dr T. C. Pang, Senior Police Forensic Pathologist, was measuring various sections of the skeleton as they were unearthed. To identify the body, it is required that every bit of the remains be examined and removed with great care.

After a short lunch break Dr Pang and the party of officers were understood to have gone back to the scene to continue with the measurements. Unearthed together with the remains yesterday were a blue-

Tomorrow will be Mr Wong's 46th birthday anniversary, and Buddhist rites will be held at the International Funeral Parlour at night for the pacification of Mr Wong's spirit, the advertisement said.

U.S. TO CUT TARIFFS

Agreement expected with Euromart

Washington Dec. 13. U.S. officials said today it is expected before the end of December that an agreement will be reached between the United States and the European Common Market nations for extensive cuts in tariff rates on industrial products.

The cut will not amount to a straight 20 per cent reduction across-the-board in the external tariffs imposed by the Common Market, high officials said.

The cuts will come in certain items, but not in others.

As far as industrial products are concerned, the cuts will be extensive, officials said.

This left open the question of tariff reductions on agricultural products which have been a bone of contention between American and European Common Market negotiators.

Authority

Under Secretary of State Mr. George W. Ball, told Congress in testimony yesterday that the United States hoped to reach an agreement on the tariff reduction move by the end of the year.

This objective remains. The United States has existing authority from Congress to make reductions in its tariffs up to 20 per cent. Not all of the reductions have yet been utilized to this limit, leaving the United States with some room for further cuts.

High State Department officials confirmed today that the reports of deep cuts are correct, but took exception to statements that this would amount to a virtually across-the-board slash.

The State Department is planning to make the U.S. position clear later today.—AP.

U.S., RUSSIA ASK FOR NEW U.N. GROUP ON DISARMAMENT

Duke reads Queen's speech

Tanganyika's Prime Minister Mr Julius Nyerere hands the Queen's speech to Prince Philip who delivered the address at the state opening of the National Assembly in Dar-es-Salaam on December 11. The Governor-General of Tanganyika, Sir Richard Turnbull, is seated beside the Duke. Prince Philip was the Queen's personal representative at the Tanganyika independence celebrations.—AP.

RESULT STILL IN DOUBT

AUSTRALIAN LABOUR MAJORITY 'LIKELY'

Melbourne, Dec. 14.

A deadlock or even a Labour majority in the Australian House of Representatives seemed more likely tonight following further counting of votes, in Saturday's general election.

Political observers said it was still possible late votes could swing enough seats to give the Labour Party a two-seat majority and so defeat the Government.

Final result will be in doubt until the distribution of preference votes next Monday, electoral officials said.

Mr Robert Menzies, the Prime Minister, told a press conference here tonight the worst thing that could happen from the viewpoint of the ruling Liberal-Country Party coalition would be a deadlocked house, with the Labour Party and Government holding 61 seats each.

12 years

Mr Menzies rejected the claim of Mr Arthur Calwell, Labour leader, that his party had won a governing mandate because it polled the greatest proportion of the total vote.

"Oh no, that shot is not on," Mr Menzies said.

The Menzies Government, in power for the past 12 years, had a record 32-seat majority in the last house.

Even if the Government obtains a slender majority in the house, it is certain to be faced with a hostile Senate (Upper House).

Under Australia's proportional representation system, the Government will have no more than 28 seats in the 10-seat Senate—Reuters.

'A rare show of unanimity' 'Reprisals against Lutuli? certainly not...'

United Nations, Dec. 13.
The Soviet Union and the United States proposed formally tonight that the U.N. General Assembly should ask a new 18-nation committee to start disarmament negotiations urgently and report back by next June 1.

In a rare show of unanimity, the Big Two joined in submitting a resolution on the subject for consideration in the Assembly's Political Committee.

This followed their agreement that the 14-10-nation East-West Committee that held fruitless disarmament talks in Geneva in 1960 should be enlarged to 18 members by the addition of eight countries, classified as neutrals.

The new members will be Burma, India, the United Arab Republic, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Brazil, Mexico and Sweden. The old members are Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania and the Soviet Union on the Communist side and Britain, Canada, France, Italy and the United States on the Western side.

The old committee negotiated in Geneva in 1960 between March 15 and March 27, when the Communist side walked out and mutual charges of bad faith.

Principles

The Soviet Union and the United States gave the General Assembly last September 20 a joint statement of principles for disarmament that they had agreed upon.

Their new resolution would have the Assembly:

1. Recommend that disarmament negotiations be based on those principles.

2. Endorse the big-two agreement on the composition of the disarmament committee.

3. Recommend that this Committee, "as a matter of the utmost urgency, undertake negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on general and complete disarmament under effective international control."

4. Request that the disarmament committee submit to the General Assembly a report on such agreement as soon as it has been reached, and in any case make a progress report to the 103-nation U.N. Disarmament Commission not later than next June 1.—AP.

Defence call

Paris. The Western European Union assembly called on Nato today to bring its ground forces up to an agreed strength of 30 divisions, warning that Nato could thus avoid having to resort to nuclear weapons in case of a Communist attack.

The North Atlantic Alliance now has about 20 fully equipped divisions and is pointing towards 21 or more by January 1.—AP.

Contempt

Albany, Georgia. A group of 74 hymn-singing Negroes knelt in prayer on the courthouse steps today to protest against the trial of 11 "Freedom Riders."

Police broke up the demonstration and a judge sentenced the leader to five days in jail for contempt of court.—UPI.

Closed

Santo Domingo. The U.S. closed its Consulate indefinitely today after a rock-throwing, anti-American demonstration. Crowds of youths shouted anti-U.S. slogans and showered a station wagon with six Consulate officers in it with a barrage of rocks. No one was hurt.—UPI.

Human rights

United Nations. The Federation of Malaya, together with Thailand and the Latin American nation of El Salvador, today called on the General Assembly to express grave concern at the "violation of fundamental human rights of the Tibetan people."—Reuters.

Uprisings

Mexico City. Scattered uprisings have broken out in Cuba during the past 24 hours, a group which claims to represent about 30,000 of the estimated 250,000 Cuban exiles said today.—AP.

Burma had agreed to export 200,000 tons of rice to Communist China next year, Premier Chou En-lai said last night.

Fixed bases

Washington, Dec. 13.
The Defence Department announced today that it is conducting a programme for using railroad cars as missile launching platforms in favour of an increase in fixed underground missile bases.

Approximately $100 million has been spent on the mobile railway programme for the Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles.—UPI.

A man who slashed his former mistress on the face was this morning given the chance he asked for — but was also warned to leave her alone in future.

Judge K. R. Macfee, in binding over Lau Wah, 36, a ship's steward, in $500 for three years told him in stern tones: "This is a very serious offence, and particularly obnoxious because you attacked a woman and slashed her face with a knife."

The judge went on to say, however, that, after considering all the circumstances, he would give Lau the chance he asked for.

He then ordered him to pay the woman $200 compensation. Lau of 30 Ha Heung-road, second floor, pleaded guilty to wounding Ngan Suk-wah on November 27 with intent to do her grievous bodily harm.

The judge went on to say, however, that, after considering all the circumstances, he would give Lau the chance he asked for. He then ordered him to pay the woman $200 compensation. Lau of 30 Ha Heung-road, second floor, pleaded guilty to wounding Ngan Suk-wah on November 27 with intent to do her grievous bodily harm.

In mitigation, Lau said he tried to persuade the woman to give up her job and go to live with him. She refused. During the struggle in the lift she grabbed him. He was "in great pain and mentally confused" when he pushed her and cut her face.

In reply to a question by Judge Macfee, Ngan said she did not want to go back to Lau. Lau said he accepted this.

An AP report from Leopoldville said an all-out military initiative by the United Nations against Katanga forces appeared imminent today.

This was echoed by a statement by Mr Tshombe released in Brussels.

The statement added that Mr Tshombe had made his "final appeal to the free world."

Another Brussels report said the United Nations today bombed President Tshombe's residence in Elisabethville for the second day in succession.

The delegation said in the last 24 hours the U.N. offensive had taken the form of air raids against industrial installations in Katanga and mortar fire, at irregular intervals, in Elisabethville.

However, in Leopoldville, the United Nations spokesman claimed today that Katangese were mortaring their own positions in Elisabethville to create the impression of U.N. atrocities.

Mr Norman Ho, reading from a situation report from Elisabethville, categorically denied that the U.N. had been shelling the centre of Elisabethville.

All but one

The report said all but one U.N. mortar detachment had been out of range, and that one did not fire, anywhere near the indicated points such as President Tshombe's residence, a Catholic Church, or the Hotel Leopold II where international correspondents reside.

The spokesman charged Katanga with firing on these positions themselves and said the claims that the United Nations were responsible were "deliberate attempts to create atrocity stories."

"The United Nations are still operating on the fringes of the city in the interest of the civilian population," he added.

A London report says — Conservative "rebels" opposing the British Government's bombs-for-the-Congo promise were today urging Mr Harold Macmillan to go farther than call for a Katanga ceasefire.

Political sources said the rightwing Conservative critics claimed that if Britain failed in her appeal to the United Nations for an immediate ceasefire in Katanga, she should withdraw her £80,000-a-week contribution to the U.N. Congo force. — AP Agencies.

THE RIDDLE OF THE WRECKED GALLEON

Hauling aboard a rusty old cannon retrieved from the mysterious galleon.

The author and his colleague Marx, having abandoned salvage work on the wreck of the Matanceros, are obsessed with the riddle of its identity. From it they harvested a rich haul of treasure in the form of pewter plates, bottles, artifacts, crucifixes, cannon, etc., none of which established beyond doubt the origin of the wreck.

OF THE HUNDREDS OF SHIPS that sailed the Indies in the period 1733-40 one was wrecked on Punta Matanceros. But which one? That was the question we were determined to answer. In time, hundreds of experts in the United States, Mexico, England, France, Holland, Germany and Spain would join in our hunt, which was almost like looking for a needle in a haystack. The search would lead us down many obscure and fascinating byways of history.

We began by ruling out certain possibilities. For example, we did not believe our ship was a pirate vessel. From the massive anchors and large number of cannons we knew she was much larger than most light, swift pirate ships.

We then ruled out men-of-war and guardacostas. Such ships, armed with as many as 60 cannons, or more, and carrying a large crew to man the ordnance, were unable to ship a large cargo of trade goods.

After careful analysis, we returned to the conclusion we had reached after our first, cursory search of the wreck. She was, we believed, a huge merchantman armed with about 20 cannons. The cargo led us to believe she was English.

As time went on, the research into this vessel's history grew tremendously complex and I was not able to devote the proper time to it.

Records

Bob Marx, who was more anxious than any of us to learn the ship's identity, flew to Washington and in co-operation with the Smithsonian Institution and the Library of Congress spent several months intensively searching the available records. During this period he read more than 200 books in the Library of Congress covering every conceivable related subject.

We had long held to the view that our lopsided bottles were English. Everything about them smacked of old England.

However, after a careful search of the books on the history of bottles and glass, Marx reported that this was not necessarily so.

A great number of German manufacturers had produced products identical with the bottles, recovered from the wreck. In fact, during 1740, bottles identical with ours were even manufactured in New Jersey, by a German immigrant named Wistar. (His bottles, widely admired, were known as Wistarberg bottles).

CONCLUDING

CLAY

This new conclusion prompted an exhaustive effort to learn more about the specific objects we recovered. We were soon to learn that such information is very hard to come by.

Turning to the religious artifacts, we consulted with Catholic religious authorities, including Father Daniel Power, a Jesuit priest at Georgetown University, Father Lino Canedo at the Franciscan Institute for Latin American Studies, and Father Charles Auth at the Dominican House of Studies in Washington.

These three men identified the saints on the various medals and helped us with the Latin, Greek, Italian, and Spanish abbreviations. But none of the medallions gave any clue to the date or nationality of the wreck. Marx then resolved the mystery of the double-transom "Cross of Lorraine."

Searching through dozens of books on crosses in the Library of Congress, he found a photograph of a double-transom cross identical with ours. Everything matched, including the figure of Christ and the Virgin Mary.

It was not a "Cross of Lorraine," but a "Cross of Caravaca," manufactured in a small town in south-eastern Spain, Caravaca. The cross is modelled after a large one of the same shape in the cathedral of Caravaca. It was specially esteemed by Spanish seamen because it was thought to help them predict winds.

The Caravaca cross was the first item we discovered definitely to have been manufactured in Spain. Since the material, workmanship, and figures on the smaller crosses (including the St Thomas cross) were similar, we concluded that all the crosses had been made by the same manufacturer, in Caravaca.

Even so, we still stubbornly clung to the view that the ship was English.

Reward

I wrote to a friend, Charles Stutton, who was an editor of the London Daily Mail.

I proposed that Stutton take all our clues and publish them in his newspaper, offering a reward to the person who solved the mystery of this important English loss.

Stutton, thinking this would hold vast appeal for his maritime-minded English readers, gave the story a large spread in two instalments, offering £100 (£200) reward, two months' salary for a retired officer, for any information. The Daily Mail was deluged with letters.

But while there was much information in the letters that led us nowhere, most of the Daily Mail readers doubted the ship was English because of the large quantity of crucifixes on board. Obsessed by the mystery, Marx and I pushed on, checking every source we could for shipping losses in the area.

With our growing knowledge, at long last, we began seriously to question our conclusion that the ship was English. By then we had thoroughly studied the political climate in the Indies during the period. In view of the war between Spain and England in 1740, it seemed highly unlikely as the Daily Mail contestants had stressed, that an English trading ship would be bound directly for a Spanish port.

We estimated that we had raised a total of about 5,000 crosses.

We knew that there were still thousands on the bottom. By extrapolation, we conservatively calculated that the ship must have carried a total of 50,000 crucifixes. What English trader could hope to dispose of such a number in a fleeting, clandestine trade in an unguarded Spanish port?

Spanish?

After a very careful reappraisal of the existing facts, we reached the conclusion that only a small fraction of the ship's cargo was, without question, English. The bulk of it could have been manufactured in any country.

The number and variety of crucifixes, knives, talismans, the proximity of Nimes to Spain, the cannons and anchors, the geographical location of the wreck, and the absence of any major loss in English shipping records for the period and place, indicated to us a ship of Spanish registry.

The more we discussed it, the more firmly we believed the wreck to be Spanish, possibly a prize taken from some West Indian port by Admiral Vernon in 1740.

One day Bob Marx turned to some extracts from "La Graceta de Mexico," a daily newspaper published in Mexico City, which were on file in the Franciscan Institute for Latin American Studies. Thumbing through the extracts for February, 1738, Marx, scarcely believing his eyes, spotted a Spanish ship named El Matanzero. The ship, a Spanish merchantman had been in the Veracruz trade about the time of our wreck.

According to the Book of Registers, El Matanzero got under way and departed Cadiz — alone — on November 30, 1740.

She is not shown as having arrived in Vera Cruz, or returning to the Indies again. Most ships that were lost were so noted in the Book of Registers. But perhaps in the drama of larger events—the invasion of Italy, the war in the Indies—the fate of El Matanzero was overlooked by the harassed book-keepers.

It may be stretching the facts somewhat, but we like to believe that El Matanzero, the stubborn ship that still refuses obscurity, represents the last of a great era.

She was, first, a member of the last of the big Spanish pleasure fleets. When they collapsed in the face of Admiral Vernon, El Matanzero hung on desperately, making one final try alone.

She carried no treasure, as such. But if our premise is accepted, then her story — as much of it as we have been able to bring to light — and our work — especially our pioneering labour in the field of marine archaeology — take on significance that to us is more valuable than the gold doubloons we had sought.

Well, almost.

OIL... OIL... OIL

THE Union Oil Development Corp. this week announced an oil flow at the A. O. G. Moonie No. 1 well about 200 miles west of Brisbane, and in a 74-minute drill stem test of the bore, it showed a mixture of 48 gravity black crude oil and water flowing at the rate of 500 barrels a day.

At least half the flow was oil. The company now plans to continue drilling from its present level of 5,925 feet to examine possibilities below 6,800 feet. This will take several weeks.

Senator Spooner, Minister for National Development said the strike was the first in Australia of crude oil with refining possibilities, and the Commonwealth Government had spent more than £1 million in the last three years subsidising oil search in Queensland.

Shares rose sharply when the flow was announced, reaching 30/- during the day, but subsided to 20/- at the close, representing a net gain of 8/8.

Exports during November were worth £101.9 million and the big increase in this cheque was partly due to a rise in the price of wool and good shipments of wool and wheat.

This is only the second time that Australia's exports have topped the £100 million mark in a month.

In a new venture this year almost 200 people will man 40 cruisers for a "Carols by Candlelight" night on Sydney Harbour on Sunday, December 17.

Sixty members of Police Boys Club Chorus, musicians, and members of the Royal Motor Yacht Club of New South Wales will take part in the two-hour procession which will circle Rose Bay, then go up the Harbour to Farm Cove and back to Rose Bay.

All the boats will carry fairy lights and will travel about 100 yards from the shore, close enough for the people on the foreshore to hear the carols. Twenty of the cruisers are 30 feet in length, others are 50, 60, and 70 footers.

Australia had its best overseas trading month in November for four and a half years, with a trading surplus of £31.2 million, which made it the largest surplus since March 1957 when the figure was £30.9 million.

Whoa's Woes

—He Keeps Hearing The Sound Of Horses—
By MAX TRELL

"It's a funny thing," said Whoa, the Hobby Horse, to his friend, Knarf and Hand, the Shadow Children, with the Turned-Around Names. "That every time I get near this open window and listen and listen... and listen with all my might."

Knarf and Hand waited for Whoa, the Hobby Horse, to finish telling them what he heard after all his listening, but Whoa, the Hobby Horse, remained silent.

Said nothing

He rocked up and down a bit but he said nothing.

Finally Knarf said:

"But what do you hear when you listen so much?"

Whoa, the Hobby Horse, shook his head.

"I guess I must be wrong," he said.

Hand went over and put her arms around Whoa's wooden neck.

"Please, dear," she said in her gentlest voice, "tell us what you think you hear. We won't laugh at you, will we, Knarf?"

"Of course not," said Knarf.

Looked at faces

Whoa, the Hobby Horse, looked from Knarf's face to Hand's face and back again.

Evidently he was satisfied that his two friends were not going to laugh at him for he said:

"Well, I hear the sound of Horses. I hear them prancing and racing. I hear them neighing and pawing the ground. I know you think I'm foolish, but I'm sure I hear the sound of lots of Horses."

Knarf and Hand didn't laugh. Instead, they went to the window. They listened. They couldn't hear anything, neither the sound of prancing, nor racing, nor neighing nor the sound of Horses' hoofs pawing the ground.

It's the park

"Why, that's the park over there," said Hand. "There are some riding Horses on the other side. But they hardly make any sound at all. I'm sure you can't hear them."

"I don't mean them at all," said Whoa, the Hobby Horse. "And sometimes," he went on, "I can hear music. The Horses that I hear seem to be racing round and round to the sound of music."

This time Knarf and Hand really thought they would start to laugh. For how could anyone hear Horses racing, round and round to the sound of music?

"I only wish," said Whoa, the Hobby Horse, "that I could go to the park and look for myself. I wonder," he added, "if you would do me a favour?"

"Of course we would," said Hand.

"Of course," said Knarf.

"What do you want us to do?"

"I wish," said Whoa, the Hobby Horse, "that the next

Hobby Horse looked from Knarf's face to Hand's face.

Looked around

Knarf and Hand went to the park the next morning. They looked in the place among the trees on the near side of the pond and saw if you can't find some Horses who are racing around and prancing and neighing to the sound of music.

"Well," said Whoa, the Hobby Horse, "I don't suppose you found any Horses, did you? I was very foolish to think that I heard them last night."

"Oh no, you were right!" exclaimed Hand.

Whoa, the Hobby Horse, looked astonished and delighted at the same time.

"You found them? Horses? Racing round and round? With music?" he asked.

"Yes," said Hand. "We did."

Beautiful Horses

"What beautiful Horses they are!" cried Knarf. "Some of them are gold! Some of them are silver! Some of them have wings!"

"It's a merry-go-round!" said Hand.

"My-oh-my-oh-my-oh-my!" said Whoa, the Hobby Horse. "And that's all he could say, which, come to think of it, is a lot for a Hobby Horse to say in any case."

Rupert and the Popweed—38

Seeing that Rupert seems friendly with these queer creatures the boy edges nearer. "I still don't know why I was brought here," says Rupert to the Mer-boy, "and I've no idea what else you've fixed up, but if it means leaving this island I do hope you can be done for them."

can take on and save his little boat, although he has lost his oars. "You're making things difficult for us. I didn't bargain for that boy," says the Mer-boy. "However, we'll try." And he calls the Seapert to see what can be done for them.

Would YOU pass as a tycoon's wife?

This is what it means to be the woman behind a man determined to get to the top

JUST how important is the wife behind any ambitious British business man eager for promotion? In America, one gathers, few men merit serious consideration for so much as a junior directorship until the little woman gets the absolute OKAY from the firm's professional advisers.

Inexpertise with a paragon's over-indulgence in "Search on the rocks" — a tendency to lurch on the edge of panic or hysteria — reference to late hours at the office, and the kiss of death on many a husband's advancement.

It is not that the wife does the heavy lifting, but that she is the one who is expected to do it. The wife is the one who is expected to be the man's "right hand" and to be the one who is expected to be the man's "left hand". Invitation

"She dropped up in every other sentence. So I invited them to dine alone with me. I intended to deal with her."

"She threatened me for a moment because of her direct attack. Mr. Tyack, you have made several positive pronouncements on my husband. You are absolutely right, but how after one meeting do you know him so well?"

"She flattered you?" I suggested.

"Not at all. What I had said of him was obvious."

"Obvious to you. You were the wise one and very cleverly she underlined your wisdom."

"No," said Mr. Tyack firmly. "She was not subtle enough for that. What she did do was

JACOBY on BRIDGE

IN third seat it is foolish indeed to open a minimum or shaded bid if you can't stand the lead of your bid suit.

Thus, East should have passed instead of opening with one club. If he had, the opponents almost surely would have stopped either at a part score or gone down at four spades. As it was, they reached game and made it.

You can't criticise West for opening the eight of clubs. His partner had bid the suit.

South won the trick with the queen, cashed the ace of clubs and ace of spades, led a trump to dummy's jack, ruffed the ten of clubs, led a low heart, played dummy's ten, and sat back with a happy smile to see what East would do.

East won with the queen and was faced with a Hobson's choice. A heart lead would cost him a heart trick; a diamond lead would make North's king of diamonds good; while a club lead would allow South to ruff in dummy and discard one of his hearts. Any one of the plays would give South his contract.

How different if East had just passed. West would have opened either a diamond or a heart. At some stage of the play, East would lead a club to his partner and declarer would be held to eight or nine tricks.

Today's Question: You hold the same hand. Your partner opens with one heart. You respond one spade, and he bids two spades. What do you do?

I'd have told you a thing or two...

It was then that the wife told him that she had heard him talking to her. And that was the end of the matter.

He smiled and said: "The heart of his grudge is with a great piece of."

"In what way, then, can the wife of a highly ambitious young business man help?" I wondered. "For example, would you look favourably on one who gave dinner parties for her husband's superiors?"

"I should be most inclined to suspect her of social climbing," he grinned and reached for his claret glass.

The skids

"Yet food and drink are the skids under so many big business deals. And pretty, witty women are complementary to any luncheon or dinner party."

I pressed him, with visions of many a reader breathing life and fire over her morning newspaper.

"When I think of the ghastly business parties I've sat through and all for the sake of Charlie, I'd have told him a thing or two."

Drinking, he agreed, is important. But a strict adherence to tonics, juice is not necessarily damning.

"A man who refuses, strong drink — who takes a firm stand — is so much more interesting than one who weakens later. And I've absolutely nothing against a man who says: 'Yes, I could do with a double Scotch!'"

"So much depends on it," he tells me why he needs it.

"We're getting away from wives," I warned him.

Then, as the waiter served our coffee, the high-powered adviser, prodding the starved white tablecloth with the sharp end of his spoon, dug deep into the heart of the matter.

"What every ambitious man determined to reach the TOP must have is an utterly uncomplaining woman at home to hold his ego nine-tenths of the time, and to administer an occasional, deflationary pin prick.

"To run his house efficiently, to care for his children, to arrive him of every outside responsibility. And that is all."

"Why?"

"Because men cannot succeed in two careers at once. It is EITHER the wife-and-the-family OR the first million. This is brutal, but it is true. Pay no attention to talk of sport and how much golf. For example, may count in business. Holidays also go by the board."

"All a man's energies must be directed to attaining that first million."

"After which..." I prompted.

"Why then, inevitably, the business that has drained so much of his life and strength is the one thing he loves with all his heart."

"Interesting chap, isn't he?" said our mutual friend as he helped me into my overcoat. "Gave you something to think about, eh?"

"I'm not thinking — I'm thanking," I told him. "Thanking God I'll never meet the toughness that awaits a tycoon's wife at the TOP."

ANOTHER DRAWN TEST LIKELY

India score 253 for three on lifeless wicket
after winning the toss

New Delhi, Dec. 13.

The third Test match between India and England seems likely to follow the pattern of the other two, with plenty of runs and few wickets.

On another pitch devoid of pace India took advantage of winning the toss and by the close on the first day had reached 253 for the loss of only three wickets, with M. L. Jaisimha, a 22-year-old all-rounder, scoring his maiden Test century, and Vijay Manjrekar playing another big innings.

Opening batsman Jaisimha hit 127 and Manjrekar was 61 not out at the close of play.

There seems little to prevent India reaching a total in the region of 500, which would leave England little alternative than to play for safety, with another draw resulting.

Used seven bowlers

England's opening bowler, David Smith and Barry Knight did a useful job of keeping the scoring rate down. Smith was the better of the two, always looking more likely to take a wicket.

England captain, Ted Dexter used seven bowlers today to try to break this solid Indian batting barrier. But in such conditions it was a heart-breaking task for the fielding side.

On a pitch that is so much against them, all they can do is to bowl as tightly as possible and hope for the best.

The Indian bowlers have no doubt become used to this ground but to the Englishmen it is a new and most unhappy experience.

India's scoring rate was a good deal faster than usual and the 66-yard boundaries undoubtedly had something to do with this.

England's ground fielding was not so good as usual and in addition they again failed to accept the half-chances which mean so much on these pitches.

Manjrekar, who is usually a good starter, began shakily today, and was unable to time the ball properly for a long time, but later in his innings he produced a full array of well-timed drives and sweeps.

Pataudi out

Nari Contractor is still unable to get among the bats. His defence is always sound but he gets himself out when trying attacking shots. Still he scored an opening stand of 121 although contributing only 39 himself.

The bowlers of England in the first Test, however, did not impress. He quickly took two wickets and scored on 13 for 40 runs, and was then out.

It is just as well for England that the weather here is cool. There is still plenty of running to be done in the field tomorrow.

Fastest century

For the time he gave his power for strokes full run with the result that he hit the fastest century of the series, reaching his hundred in 190 minutes, and gave the 55,000 crowd plenty of entertainment.

He drove the Surrey pair, Tony Lock and Ken Barrington, each for a six and there were also 14 fours in his 127 scored out of 199 in 250 minutes.

He and Manjrekar are counting Barrington in their consistency. In four innings Jaisimha has never been under 50, hitting 304 runs for an average of 70. Including this not out 61 Manjrekar has hit 309 runs for an average of 103. He has also never been under 50.

Big lead by Burma in SEAP Games on third day

Rangoon, Dec. 13.

Burma, the host country, went far out into the lead here tonight after the third day's events of the Southeast Asian Peninsular Games when its swimmers won four out of five events.

The victories lifted Burma's gold medal tally to 12, double that of its nearest rival, Thailand.

Vietnam was the only visiting nation to win a swimming final tonight, the successful competitor being Phan Huu Dong who took the men's 100 metres butterfly in a fast time of 1 min 9.6 secs.

Four preliminary badminton matches were also held tonight with Cambodia, Thailand, and Malaysia scoring successes in the men's singles and doubles.

Highlight

The highlight of the evening was the clash of Channarong Rutanaeng and Suang of Thailand, and Thi Kwan-san of Malaysia.

A capacity crowd of 3,000 cheered so enthusiastically that they had to be quietened at the request of the referee, during the second game of their hour-long match.

Although Thi lost the match, he amazed the crowd with his backhand shots. He retrieved and hit several winners from this wing and on several occasions had Channarong shaking his head with bewilderment.

The Thai run of victories began this morning when Amorn Yuktanand proved steeper than Burma's lieutenant Shein in the short range pistol event.

Double winner

Li Shein who won a gold medal yesterday in the Free Rifle event over 300 metres had been widely tipped to show his versatility by taking the pistol shoot easily.

But he finished 22 points behind Yuktanand although he was more than 100 points ahead of the third place, Kok Kun-wah of Singapore.

Malaya's Lily Tan scored a brilliant close second victory over Grace Cara of Burma in the women's 80 metres hurdles final. She beat the former SEAP champion by 0.1 second.

The judges deliberated for 15 minutes before giving a photo-finish decision to the visitor. Tan's winning time was 12.3 seconds. Evelyn Lee Yuet-yong of Singapore was third in 12.5 seconds.

Tan's win gave Malaya its fourth gold medal of the Games. The Thai gold medalists were Sorn Buhn Chon Grak who lifted 732.5 pounds in the featherweight weightlifting and sprinter Suthi Manyakas who took the 100 metres.

Manyakas fought a close race with N. Jegathesan of Malaya but sprouted ahead 10 yards just before the post to win by 0.2 seconds in 10.4 seconds. Low Sin-chock of Singapore was third in 10.9 seconds.

Collapsed

In the gruelling 5,000 metres run in high humidity and a temperature of 85 degrees Fahrenheit, Tou Fu of Laos collapsed after 3,000 metres.

Officials rushed onto the track as Tou suddenly fell almost in front of the victory dais. He was carried away so quickly that many spectators were not aware of what had happened.

Tou started badly and was one lap behind the leaders when he fell.

The race was won by Ah Hpu of Burma who broke his own SEAP Games record by 4.5 seconds winning in 15 minutes 46 seconds.

Ah Hpu also won the 10,000 metres yesterday in record time and has emerged as the outstanding distance running star of Southeast Asia.

Top world drivers may now race at Daytona Beach after new FIA ruling

Daytona Beach, Dec. 13.

Some of the best drivers in the world—perhaps even Stirling Moss—will race here in February as the result of a new ruling by the international governing body of motor racing.

The Federation Internationale De L'Automobile (FIA) has designated the first annual Daytona International Championship Three-hour Road Race on Feb. 11 as one of the races counting towards the World Manufacturers' Championship.

Under a new FIA ruling, prototype cars will no longer be allowed to compete for the manufacturers' title. In 1962, this field will be open to only Grand Touring cars, which are closed production model cars a person could buy off a sports car dealer's floor.

Henceforth, the only U.S. races counting toward the manufacturers' championship was the 12-hour Endurance Race at Sebring.

But the FIA ruled that in 1962, prototype cars will be allowed to compete in four international events for the "World Speed and Endurance challenge." The only U.S. event will be Sebring on March 24 which will also count toward the manufacturers' title for the GT cars entered.

$15,000 prizes
The three-hour Daytona Beach race will be run over the 3.81-mile sports car course.

The Daytona Beach race will offer $15,000 in prizes plus an additional $4,000 for Formula Junior races set for February 10.

Hongkong wild birds may be radio-active

by ALADIN ISMAIL

Hongkong people hunting migratory birds coming from areas recently affected by nuclear test fallout, should test them with geiger counters before eating them.

The China Mail was told this authoritatively yesterday that the source said, however, that these migratory birds coming to the Colony from the region of the recent Soviet nuclear tests are not likely to be highly radio-active.

The reason because these birds do not fly at the height of the heavy radio-active fallout particles.

Great heights

"Heavy particles from radio-active fallout rise to great heights and remain there a long time," the source said. He said, however, that the opinion was reached from the technical observation of nuclear test fallout and not from actual studies of birds coming from the region.

"And for this reason, unless we find out from actual tests, we cannot overlook the possibility that these birds are in fact contaminated, to some extent. After all, a great deal of geese and duck and other waterfowl from the Arctic region disperse in the winter all round Asia and Europe," he said. The best thing, he said, would be for those people who come across the birds to test them with geiger counters.

Serious

The China Mail sought this opinion after receiving reports that the Singapore public had been warned about the serious danger of eating birds contaminated by the Soviet Arctic nuclear blast fallout.

A physics lecturer in the University of Malaya in Singapore was quoted as saying that contaminated birds "could be highly dangerous and could mean death if eaten."

The report went on to quote news from New Delhi that eight waterfowl shot on the outskirts of that city were highly radio-active. The waterfowl thought to be radio-active were identified as the Whimbrel, the Lark, the Ringed Plover, the Red Shank and the Golden Plover. As far as Hongkong is concerned as many as 40 species of migratory birds, or even more, either rest here for the winter or pass on down to Singapore and India and even on to Africa.

These migratory birds include wild duck and geese that came down from the Arctic region—and all those mentioned in the report from Singapore.

The Yellow-Nib Duck and the Falcated Teal, which come from Siberia, are fairly numerous in the Colony, and these, together with the Asio Golden Plover, are classified as game under the Colony's Ordinance on the protection of wild birds and wild mammals.

They are found most commonly in the Deep Bay marshes, in Plover Cove, Shatin, Port Shelter and Shau-keuk.

Customs men seize illicit stills

Customs "penetration patrols" continued to harass illicit distillers of Chinese liquor, the Government reported today.

It said that as a result of these patrols, 23 persons were convicted by the courts and some 2,149 gallons of fermenting material were discovered and destroyed in October.

Other Customs patrols seized 500 taels of gold on board a major trading vessel from Macao and arrested a man in connection with the case.

Apart from this, "the police made the largest single seizure of 800 pounds of Chinese prepared tobacco from a car in the New Territories in that month some 11,000 pounds of Chinese prepared tobacco were seized in all."

Man charged with snatching two handbags

A 26-year-old unemployed man, charged with robbery with violence and snatching, appeared before Mr. K. A. S. Phillips at Central Magistracy this morning.

Chan Cheung, residing outside the Sun Kwong Hotel, Des Voeux-road West, was remanded for eight days in jail custody for further enquiries.

He is alleged to have robbed Ip Yuk-ching of a handbag containing $378 and to have used personal violence on her at Seymour-road on December 12.

He is further alleged to have snatched a handbag containing $46 from Wong Mei-ying at Seymour-road, near Caine-road on September 2.

No plea was taken.

REPULSE BAY SEARCH

(Lower right) a senior Police Officer crossing to the digging site. Parked by the curb is a Forestry Service truck which brought a digging crew to the site.

PAINTINGS, ENGRAVINGS OF UNUSUAL INTEREST ON DISPLAY

An exhibition of oil paintings and engravings of unusual interest is on view at St John's Cathedral Hall.

The works are by Mr. Lee Lau Dun, who studied painting in Chungking and in Borneo. His teacher in Chungking had himself studied in France and this influence is strongly visible in Mr. Lee's oil paintings of landscapes. Although he paints such subjects as the West Bridge at Shamen, Canton, and local scenes, one is reminded of Sisley's light and shade effects.

Topographically, as well as artistically interesting, is a wood engraving of the mountain city of Chungking, of which the plate has been lost. The artist has mastered the art of engraving and bold examples in black and white as well as coloured plastic engravings are to be seen. The impression given by all the pictures, including the still life studies, is of vitality, and the artist has caught the atmosphere of some of the loveliest scenery in the New Territories. The exhibition will remain open until Saturday, December 16, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.—M.P.

Goa and China

Your leading article yesterday on the Goa question rightly contrasts Mr. Nehru's attitude to Chinese invasion and the threatening position he is taking over Goa.

The Indian Premier is quoted as telling Parliament: "I am free to confess to this house that my soul recoils against war anywhere." And we must assume that when he says "anywhere" he means "anywhere" including Goa. If so, why the troop movements? Why the statement "Our patience is exhausted"? I wonder, does Mr. Nehru realise that he appears to be taking exactly the same attitude towards Goa as the Chinese are taking to the Indian border? Letters from you to the editor INDIA AND GOA

dear sir

Thank you for the editorial in yesterday's issue of your paper. I think that you have expressed precisely the wishes of your readers to whom the problem of Goa is more than a passing headline.

Thinking people everywhere who feel the pressure of contemporary events must continue to hope that the ultimate political status of Goa will be determined by negotiation.

The Portuguese, despite their alliance with England which is now 600 years old, appreciate that in this crisis the voice of India, heard within the conclave of the British Commonwealth, must inevitably be more persuasive than their own.

British support of the Portuguese case is therefore expected only in so far as it can help Mr. Nehru to see the desirability of discussion, and not aggression, and your editorial last night was a valuable contribution towards that end.

As of today, Portuguese policy vis-a-vis Goa does not admit of negotiations conceived and carried out solely for the disposal of the enclave in favour of India. What you call an enclave has had 500 years of association with Portugal as an overseas province, and so to negotiate under pressure for its dismemberment from the mother country without taking into account the wishes of the Goans themselves, or the forces that have operated in the course of these centuries to mould the Luso-Goan who is hardly an Indian any more, is understandably unreasonable.

That a basis of negotiations exists can be seen from Mr. Nehru's willingness to retain Goa's "special cultural and religious personality," in the event of its absorption into the Indian Union. This concession at once accords a foreign outlook to Goa, since the presence there of a personality and a mentality distinct from those of the Indian majority, with all that is certain to imply.

To introduce by arbitrary action the notion that by virtue of geographical proximity a larger state has the right to annex a smaller state against the wishes of the people of the latter, must surely continue to be inadmissible to all thinking men. The Goans have not claimed independence, nor does any substantial evidence exist that they prefer to adhere to India.

In any case, if Mr. Nehru marched in tomorrow and took Goa over, and the world did nothing about it except to deplore the use of force, the legally constituted political structure of many parcels of land scattered everywhere would instantly collapse. The Portuguese case is "exasperating" simply because it is legally and morally beyond any possible dispute. Thus it is urgent to discourage the employment of brute force, and the creation of conditions making possible a discussion of the matter between India and Portugal themselves. When Portugal met India in Goa 500 years ago, it was to bring Europe to Asia. That in itself, seen in its historical perspective, makes every thinking Portuguese view the prospect of a coming war with India with painful misgiving. A. DA CRUZ.

Goa and China

Your leading article yesterday on the Goa question rightly contrasts Mr. Nehru's attitude to Chinese invasion and the threatening position he is taking over Goa.

The Indian Premier is quoted as telling Parliament: "I am free to confess to this house that my soul recoils against war anywhere." And we must assume that when he says "anywhere" he means "anywhere" including Goa. If so, why the troop movements? Why the statement "Our patience is exhausted"? I wonder, does Mr. Nehru realise that he appears to be taking exactly the same attitude towards Goa as the Chinese are taking to the Indian border? The MacMahon Line, says China, is a relic of imperialism and must be revised (i.e. unilaterally). The Portuguese enclave of Goa, says Mr.

Nehru, is a relic of imperialism and must be removed (i.e. unilaterally).

If Mr. Nehru decides to settle the Goa question by force of arms, what pretext can he offer for resisting Chinese incursions?

I only wish that Mr. Nehru's policies were guided by logic rather than muddle-headed idealism and that he were a little more consistent in applying the high principles which he so frequently and self-righteously gives vent to.

If the Goan nationalists want freedom and independence, if they find Portuguese rule so unbearable and if India means so much to them, the solution surely is simple—get out of Goa and take up residence in Mother India where their vociferous and zealous nationalism can be used to good account in keeping the Chinese from nibbling away at India's northern borders. Conduit-road

It is amazing how the traffic officers can allow people to jeopardise their lives by walking on a narrow road because cars are parked on the foot-path, or the city planning board can destroy the beauty of a street by permitting the same thing and allowing beggars, shops etc on the steps — yet letters to the Police Department go unheeded and another lovely quiet street in Hongkong is destroyed by the disinterested policemen who patrol Conduit-road. STANDING on a decorated platform on the steps of the Supreme Court on Saturday afternoon, His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, proclaimed the accession to the throne of King George VI, formerly Duke of York following the abdication of his brother, King Edward VIII.

Half an hour before, at an extraordinary session of the Legislative Council and in the presence of a gathering representing the Services and all sections of the civilian community, His Excellency moved a resolution by which Councillors pledged the Colony's allegiance to the new Sovereign.

His Excellency also announced that today would be a public holiday in observance of the new King's birthday and that a March Past by the Garrison forces through city streets would synchronise with the firing of the Royal Salute at 11 am. Yesterday, however, this ceremonial was cancelled at the wish of His Majesty.

The ideal holiday is how Miss Bessie Owen describes an aeroplane jaunt from California to Hongkong over three continents and a dozen countries. Miss Owen arrived here—and completed the final leg of her 15-months flight—at 12.40 pm on Saturday, having flown from Canton during the morning. The landing at Kai Tak airport was a difficult one, for the wind was high and the surrounding hills made air currents erratic. With the skill born of so many hours flying during the holiday, however, Miss Owen brought her plane safely down and stepped from it at the hanger fresh and confident.

Sister Helena (Louise Andrieux) is knighted for her missionary, educational and charitable work during her thirty years stay in China and her work in Hongkong. She arrived in the Colony in 1948.
